6. H. Love and Associates Want School Superintendents Chosen by People.

From a new standpoint, S. H. Love, the House member from Luenenburg, is making his fight this session against the handling by the State Board of Education of the selection of division school superintendents. Two years are he introduced a bill requiring that no person should be elected to such an office unless a resident of the district. It passed the House, but did not get through the Senate.

trict. It passed the House, but did not get through the Senate.

—r. Love has decided not to offer his old bill at this session. Instead, he will attempt to secure an amendment to the Constitution providing that division school superintendents shall be elected by a vote of the people. Fifteen members of the House are co-patrons, including some of the most influential men, and Mr. Love feels that he will get it through without trouble.

Naturally, it will in no case affect aperintendents for the next term, since the amendment could not become effective until lafter these men are Beulah Poynter Play.

Beulah Poynter, just as blonde as ever, and, incidentally, just as winning, is back at the Bijou Theatre this week, and will give the regulation jumber of performances, this time presenting. "A Kentucky Romance."

She pleased not only her audence, but this particular writer, which is by no means always the case. In the first place, she has a play which, while it gives the leading woman a chance to display all of her peculiar charms, both histrionic and physical—she appears in bare feet during two acts—is appealing in a more direct sense than most of the plays which are finally dished out to the popular priced time. The story of the play is not new. Nothing bordering on the bernardshawish extravagances is contained within the written lines, but the plot, as it unfolds, is exagaging, not because of its newness, or because it solves any problem newer than the creation of man and woman, but because it is told in a good way, with some lines good enough to keep in the scrapbook.

Cynthia Hargrave (Beulah Poynter) is adopted by a man who is the murderer of her father. She lives her life in Kentucky until the particular knight of her fancy arrives. Then she loves and marries him. An avarictous mother, jelous of the social standing of her son, is not reconciled to the marrings nor is another young person who is enamored of the man who marries where he loves. Thus the complications arise. They are settled in the fourth act, the last, according to the dramatist's license of making everybody live happly forever and aday.

Enough has been said of Miss Poynter, She deserves praise because shemelts it Of her supporting cast. Berton for the interest of the man who marries the heavy problem in the fourth act, the last, according to the dramatist's license of making everybody live heapply forever and a day.

The bill aims to disable the contributory negligence doctrine, which has been interpreted by courts to bar a claim for damages instituted by an employe when injured in the service of a corporation, when it is proved that the accident was due in any degree to the carelessness of the injured man. The proposed law would leave to the jury to determine the relative degree of blame that attaches to both the employe and company, and award damages accordingly.

No treatment can have any curative eight healthy matter from the circulation. No treatment can have any curative effect except a medicine which will renovate the blood and entirely remove the cause. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., are sometimes helpful in reducing inflammation, cleansing the ulcer, or perhaps lessening the discharge, but such applications do not reach the blood where the disease germs are located and can never effect a cure. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation, drives out all impurities and morbid matter, and by nourishing the flesh with rich pure blood causes the place to heal naturally and permanently. S. S. S. does not make a surface cure, but by beginning at the bottom, and rebuilding broken-down tissue, and supplying healthful, healing qualities to the blood, causes the place to fill in with new, firm flesh, while it steadily but surely effects a permanent cure.
